

The Spring Forward Project

During this project, the students had to create a design to help beautify abandoned homes in their community. These artistic renditions would replace the standard plywood sheets used to board up vacant and abandoned homes. The students worked for 3 weeks creating and coloring their door and window designs. Once they were finished, they were submitted to the people running the project. Next the students went in and primed many of the boards that were going to be used the next day by the other artists that submitted designs. After they were finished priming, our students started painting their designs on their boards. When the boards were finished they were put up on abandoned homes to help keep the neighborhood looking its best.
